THE INFANTRY CENTER

MAJ. GEN. JOHN W. O'DANIEL,
Commandant, The Infantry Center, Ft.
Benning, Ga.

ELIMINATION of three separate headquarters at Fort Benning and their consolidation into The Infantry Center in accord with the present economy program has brought about many changes in the location of offices. Both the old Post headquarters and The Infantry School building are still utilized, but, instead of the crowded conditions prevailing prior to the consolidation, there is now sufficient space to prevent undesirable office congestion.

Maj. Gen. O'Daniel

The purpose behind the move was to bring under a single command the activities at Fort Benning. The duplication of activities of the various commands overlapped, causing a waste of both military and civilian personnel. After exhaustive study and many conferences the consolidation ordered by Army Ground Forces headquarters in accordance with the War Department's policy was completed. This move for greater efficiency in the chain of command at Fort Benning has effected a necessary economy of funds and manpower.

An early step in the plan of consolidation was the elimination of The Airborne School as a separate unit. This move brought that organization, along with its personnel, into The Infantry School. The move, of course, did not mean the elimination of the functions of the Airborne School, but it did mean a great reduction of duplication existing under the dual set-up. As the Airborne Section of The Infantry School, the former Airborne School has definitely not lost its identity and the same splendid instruction is still carried on by the same personnel. This combination of the two separate schools expanded the Academic Department. The Infantry School into six departments of instruction, in addition to the Army Extension course and Training Literature and Visual Aids Section, under the Assistant Commandant. The airborne units on the post were then transferred to The Infantry School's School Troops, thus reducing duplication of administration.

The next move was the consolidation of Seventh Army units at Fort Benning Post
Headquarters and Army Ground Forces Board Number Three under command of the new Infantry Center which was organized around The Infantry School as the major installation. Since no additional personnel were allocated to The Infantry Center for staff assignments, staff officers of The Infantry School and the Post of Fort Benning were appointed to these positions in addition to their other duties

Preservation of USMC Put up to Committee

The problem of assuring the continuaance of the U. S. Marine Corps as an effective component of the National Defense team was put up to the Senate Committee on Armed Services this week by General Alexander A. Vandegrift, Commandant of the Marine Corps. General Vandegrift told the committee that he has never opposed the principle of unification and is in accord with the over-all objectives of the present bill, but said,
"I have become increasingly concerned about the danger of lessening the degree of civilian, including Congressional, control over our military establishment by concentrating great powers in a single individual."

"I have become apprehensive," he declared, "of the results that may ensue unless those powers are more sharply defined and there is a clearer meeting of minds as to just what authority is vested in the Secretary of National Defense."

General Vandegrift asserted that the bill has two defects: "(1) It affirms the existence of the Marine Corps without expressly stating the roles and missions which the Corps is expected to perform.
(2) It completely excludes the Marine Corps from participating in the joint bodies and agencies which the bill would establish."

Also heard this week were Admiral
Thomas C. Hart, USN (Ret.) and Maj.
Gen. Norman T. Kirk, USA, Surgeon General of the Army.

Meanwhile, the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments held another meeting on unification, recalling Secretary of War Patterson for further questioning. Mr. Patterson opposed amending the bill to further define functions of the various components.
Representative Wadsworth (R-NY) asked if supplies would be furnished to the Air Corps by a supply officer within that corps. Replying in the negative, Secretary Patterson said that "The Secretary of National Defense would prevent overlapping, and so not set up separate engineer, quartermaster, and ordnance sections in the Air Corps."

Admiral Hart contended that the Navy fears the sea, air and ground combination of the Navy will be seriously damaged by the bill in its present form; that during the war there was the idea that the Army and Navy air corps should be merged; and that for years there has been an effort to absorb or abolish the Marines, even by the Navy, and that the Navy fears a "chiselling" process will follow—that parts of what now constitutes the Navy will be chipped away. To guard against the "chiselling" of the Naval Air Force and Marine Corps, the Admiral said the functions of those services should be defined in the bill. Senator Gurney interjected that he did not see anything in the bill that indicates that there will be a chiselling.

Admiral Hart then said his main argument is against setting up a separate Air Force in the Army—"I cannot see that the Army Air Corps will be at a disadvantage if kept a part of the Army. The Army Air Corps has defensive and offensive functions but is at no disadvantage either way.

Urges Single Medical Service

Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon
General of the Army, told the Senate Committee on Armed Services 18 April that there is "but one real solution" to the problem of providing adequate medical care in future warfare and that is "the establishment of a single, integrated Medical Service."

When Senator Tydings (D-Md.) asked if he considers the proposed unification plan "a good or bad thing," General Kirk replied, "It will all depend on how the Secretary of National Defense sets up the Medical Service from a medical standpoint, from the standpoint of the future National Defense."

Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, (MC), USN, Surgeon General of the Navy, was waiting to follow General Kirk on the witness stand, but the meeting adjourned before he could be heard. Admiral Swanson was prepared again on 21 April to testify but General A. A. Vandegrift, commandant of the Marine Corps, was heard ahead of him. However, the Committee plans to hear the Navy Surgeon General at an early meeting.

General Kirk's testimony, much of which, he emphasized, was expressing his personal views and not those of the War Department, did not come as too much of a surprise in light of the previous testimony by General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff. General Eisenhower had impressed upon the committee the gravity of the medical problem, both now and in the event of another war, and had said that he was looking closely into the matter of combinations, pointing out that that very day he had been examining with the Veterans' Administration the possibility of bringing their medical service in with the Army's.

General Kirk, whose tour of duty will expire in June, said in a brief, introductory statement that "Under the provisions of S. 758 it is the War Department's plan to follow the Medical Department organization now in operation and that all personnel, installations, and activities presently assigned to the Air Forces will continue initially. The Secretary of National Defense, during a period of two years, will develop plans and policies for the medical services which are to serve the Armed Forces."

Upon the suggestion of Senator Robertson that he would like to have a personal statement from General Kirk on the bill, General Kirk made it clear that his plan
"is not in accord with the agreements reached by the Secretaries of War and Navy and approved by the President."

The following colloquy then took place:
Sen. Gurney: "Do you agree that the Medi-

Committee Asks Navy Questions on Promotion

The Navy was told by the House subcommittee on personnel in the Armed Services this week to write out answers to a set of detailed questions on the operation of its proposed promotion plan to form part of the record of hearings on Service promotion legislation.

"Why wouldn't it be better, in the interest of obtaining the best qualified officers," the Navy was asked, "to shorten the transition period, make a more strenuous effort to obtain additional Regular officers from the several hundred thousand Reserves and temporary officers with war experience, then weed out, on an impartial basis, the poorest of all Regular officers as things tighten up?"

And "wouldn't this produce better officers in the long run, by bringing your selection and attrition procedures more promptly to bear on the Regular Establishment, rather than deferring them for 10 years?" the questions continued.

The questions were prepared by Mr.
Bryce N. Harlow, a member of the Committee's professional staff, who has completed a study of Army and Navy promotion plans in order to advise Committee members on the promotion bills. His questions cover such special subjects as attrition, cost, flag rank, merger, promotion zone, Reservists, retirement and severance pay, selection system, and the transition period.

"With a normal 20 per cent attrition between grades, isn't it a great waste of trained manpower and Government investment to eliminate each year, under stabilized conditions, some 17 per cent of each group who are well qualified to serve in the higher grade?" Mr. Harlow asked.

"Why cannot a suitable middle ground be found—comparable, perhaps, to the Army's new system, or the system the Navy had under the 1938 law—whereby qualified officers are not forced out of the Navy in the lower grades but may be retained as 'additional numbers in grade'?"

"Will not one effect of this bill be to give most Regular officers two permanent promotions without selection during the course of the next 5 to 10 years?"

Some of Mr. Harlow's questions call for clear statements of policy. Mr. Harlow entered the Army through ROTC at the outset of World War II, and served in the office of General of the Army George C. Marshall, USA. He recorded the Inter-Allied Conference leading to the invasion of Africa, and subsequently worked in the Legislative Liaison Section of the War Department, leaving the service with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel.

Mr. Harlow's points of question on the Navy promotion bill were supported during the week's hearings by Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), former chairman of the House Naval Affairs committee and ranking minority member of the House Committee on Armed Services. Mr.
Vinson said that outside of the Navy, he thought Mr. Harlow knew more than anyone else about the Navy bill.

Representative Vinson supported Mr.
Harlow's contention that the Navy's plan to employ Naval Reserve and Temporary officers on a year-by-year basis during the Rights to Promotion

Youngstown Vindicator—"The presence of Lt. Col. James A. Killian's name on the latest list of Army promotions showed the unsatisfactory nature of the Army's seniority system for advancing officers."

Washington Star—"President Truman acted with good judgment in exercising his powers as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy to strike from an Army promotion list the name of Lt. Col. James A. Killian. Thereby he has directed attention anew to the need for revision of Army promotion laws—a need recently stressed by Secretary of War Patterson."

Boston Traveler—"President Truman did exactly right in removing the name of Lt. Col. James A. Killian from the colonelcy promotion list. Thumbs down on Killian's promotion is an excellent illustration of the need of higher rank by merit instead of by seniority."

Baltimore Sun—"President Truman was well within his rights and certainly acted in keeping with the sentiments of the public at large when he struck Lieutenant Colonel Killian's name from the promotion list before sending it to the Senate for action."

Newark Star-Ledger—"The colonel protests that President Truman's action is contrary to the express provisions of existing law. Killian may be well advised concerning the law, but he certainly is badly advised on public relations."

New York Sun—"Removal of Lt. Col. James A. Killian's name from the promotion list will allow the Senate to act promptly on confirmation of more than 680 lieutenant colonels nominated for promotion to colonel in the Regular Army."

Denver Post—"Col. James A. Killian of Highland Park, Ill., did not get his automatic promotion. Of the 683 nominations for army advancement, his was the only one denied by President Truman. That rejection will not make ex-GI's feel bad."

The ground forces would be at a disadvantage if the Air Corps is set up as a separate organization; that gets away from unification and will develop duplication. There should be in the Cabinet a civilian Secretary of Transportation—air, sea, and land. I would strengthen the two Department structure. The Air Corps part of the structure should be rebuilt and kept as it is.

To questions of Senators Maybank and Tydings, Admiral Hart said that he favors the two Department plan and not a third Department, and that the bill would hinder the development of the Air Service—"The Air might swallow the Army."

Senator Robinson then asked, "You are opposing the bill?"

Admiral Hart—Only one feature—if this is changed I shall be for unification.

Commenting on these defects, General Vandegrift said:

"The failure of the bill to assign specific functions to the Marine Corps is a source of grave concern to me, for it allows the Corps to be stripped of everything but name—to reduce it to a role of military impotence. I wish to dwell upon the position of extreme vulnerability in which the Corps will be placed by enactment of the bill in its present form."

"Unless a statutory statement of the missions of the Marine Corps is included, its functions become dependent solely upon the arbitrary judgment of the Secretary of National Defense. The size, the character, and the organization of the Corps will lie in his hands. There is not a single specialty which the Marine Corps has brought to a state of perfection which cannot be summarily transferred to some other service."

"I believe that Congress and the people have a clear-cut idea as to the sort of Marine Corps they wish to maintain. I believe that they wish to maintain in the future the same kind of a Marine Corps they have known in the past—one which serves aboard our ships of war and guards our naval stations—one which protects our national interests on foreign shores when danger threatens—above all, one which has developed amphibious warfare and which stands ready in substantial force to sail with the fleet to wage such warfare whenever and wherever the occasion arises."

"There is only one way to insure that the nation shall have this kind of Marine Corps. That insurance—that guarantee—is a plain and unmistakable legislative statement of exactly what Congress expects the Marines to do."

"The other defect of the bill, as it affects the Marine Corps, is the exclusion of Marine representatives from the joint bodies and agencies to be established or given statutory recognition by the bill. From the Joint Staff down to the Central Intelligence Agency, the participation of Marine officers is not mentioned. As the bill now stands, it denies to these joint bodies the wealth of experience and unique knowledge of a Corps which literally epitomizes joint operations."

"The Marine Corps has participated in joint operations throughout its entire existence. The joint doctrines of both the Army and the Navy today are in large part the results of the research, study, and thinking of Marine officers who, for twenty years prior to Pearl Harbor, devoted their conscientious and unceasing efforts to the formulation and perfection of the methods and techniques of amphibious warfare in joint operations. I ask that Marine officers be included in the several joint boards and agencies. I ask it because they have a distinct and substantial contribution to make in the field of inter-service coordination, a contribution born of their experience."

As General Vandegrift stressed his belief that the Executive Order should become an integral part of the bill so as to provide by law for the roles and missions of the Marine Corps, Senator Byrd asked him whether he had a description that would "better the Executive Order?" In reply General Vandegrift offered the suggestion that to Sections 103 and 106 of the current bill should be added the following sub-sections:

In Section 103 on page 4, line 15, after the word "Navy," insert the words "Marine Corps."

In Section 106 add the following sub-sections:

"(b) Section 1616 of the Revised Statutes (34 USC 711) is hereby repealed."

"(c) There shall be maintained at all times within the naval service and under the supervision of the Secretary of the Navy the United States Marine Corps, including the reserve components thereof, to perform the following functions and such other duties and missions as directed by the President:

"(1) To provide a balanced Fleet Marine Force, including its supporting air component, for service with the Fleet in the seizure or defense of advanced naval bases or for the conduct of such limited land operations as are essential to the prosecution of a naval campaign;

"(2) To provide detachments and organizations for service on armed vessels of the Navy;

"(3) To provide security detachments for protection of naval property at naval stations and bases;

"(4) To provide forces for duty in the occupation of foreign territory or for other duty on shore when directed by the President;

"(5) To continue to develop tactics, technique and equipment relating to those phases of amphibious warfare pertaining to the landing force and the defense of naval bases."

"In Section 112 on page 13, line 24, after the word 'Navy' insert the words '(including the United States Marine Corps).'

"In Section 202 (b) on page 20, lines 19 and 24, after the words 'Navy,' insert the words 'the United States Marine Corps.'"

The following colloquy resulted from the suggestion of amending the bill:

Sen. Byrd—Your amendments have to do with basic functions?

Gen. Vandegrift—Yes.

Sen. Tydings—If we put them in the legislation what will prevent the Marine Corps from being taken off the ships and using them elsewhere?

Gen. Vandegrift—There would be nothing to prevent it. My amendments provide that the President could assign them to land duties.

Sen. Tydings—But your amendment leaves a loophole. In time of peace and in time of war have you objection to the Marine Corps functions being changed by the Commander-in-Chief?

cal Department had difficulty in getting the necessary support sometimes, getting quick decisions, because of the fact that you were not able to go directly to the Chief of Staff?"

Gen. Kirk: "I had authority to go to the Chief of Staff. I had difficulty, as all corps do, under the present organization of the Medical Department, not only in Washington, but in the theaters and in the field. There have been difficulties."

Sen. Tydings: "From a medical standpoint, General, do you consider that this merger bill is a good or a bad thing?"

Gen. Kirk: "It will all depend on how the Secretary sets up the medical service from a medical standpoint, from the standpoint of the future National Defense. There is nothing in the bill that says anything about the medical service."

Sen. Robertson: "General, how do you feel that would have to be set up in order to be satisfactory for operation?"

Gen. Kirk: "Are you asking me a personal question, or as representing the War Department's plan? Do you ask me what I think or what the War Department thinks?"

Sen. Robertson: "I would like to hear what the War Department thinks and then I would like to hear what you think."

Gen. Kirk: "I have stated the War Department's opinion."

Sen. Robertson: "I would like to hear what you think. You are a responsible officer in that Department. I would very much like to hear what you think."

Gen. Kirk: "I have prepared a statement here on what I think, if you have time to listen to it."

Sen. Robertson: "I certainly will try to take it for 15 minutes."

Gen. Kirk: "It wouldn't take me that long, sir."

Sen. Gurney: "We would very much like to have that statement, General Kirk, because I value your experience in operating the Medical Corps during the war. I know we are short on medical men in civilian life as well as in the Armed Services and I very definitely feel that we have got to do something in order to be sure we have enough medical men for the Armed Services, as well as civilians. We would be glad to have your own personal statement."

Gen. Kirk: "Gentlemen, after having given careful attention to the problems of providing medical service for the Armed Forces I have reached the conclusion that there is but one real solution, the establishment of a single, integrated Medical Service, and offer for your consideration a plan for such a Medical Service."

"I am obligated to inform you that this plan is not in accord with the agreements reached by the Secretaries of War and Navy and approved by the President. It is a plan which I believe is workable. However, I do not wish to propose it as the only solution. I would be willing to go along with any reasonable plan which will accomplish the desired objective, namely, a single Medical Service."

"The plan for the organization of an Armed Forces Medical Service to provide a Medical Service to all components of the Armed Forces and to meet the specific requirements of each force:

"Initially, the Armed Forces Medical Service would be formed from the Medical Services of the Army and Navy, including their personnel and the Medical Department facilities now operated by these services."

"The Armed Forces Medical Service would be commanded by a Director General appointed from the senior medical officers of the Regular Medical Corps of the Army or Navy, to serve on the staff of the Secretary of National Defense and to be responsible to him for advice on the health and medical care of all components of the Armed Forces."

"The Director General would prepare policies, plans and directives governing the Medical Service; operate, command, and administer all Medical Department troops and installations not attached to the major forces."

"Operations of the Medical Service in the Zone of the Interior and overseas theaters would be decentralized to Deputy Directors, who would supervise and command the Medical Services and installations in these regional areas except those attached to a major force. The regional areas or districts would correspond to those set up by the Armed Forces, such as the six Army geographical areas into which the Zone of the Interior is now divided."

"The Armed Forces Medical Service, under the Director General, would be charged with:

"(a) The operation of common hospitalization for the Armed Forces—all fixed hospitalization—including general, station and convalescent hospitals in the Zone of the Interior and overseas departments and in the Communication Zone in war;

"(b) The operation of preventive medicine service, vital statistics, and common sick and wounded records;

"(c) The operation of a common research and development program, clinical and research laboratories, the Army Medical Library, and the Army Institute of Medical Pathology;

"(d) Common procurement, storage and issue of medical supplies;

"(e) Personnel procurement, officers and civilian employees; technical training and assignment of all commissioned, enlisted, and civilian employees;

"(g) Preparation and defense of budgetary estimates for the requirements of its operations; the construction and repair of all required medical installations;

"(h) The coordination and direction of evacuation of sick and wounded by air and sea (medical regulator)."

The plan as outlined by General Kirk provides for a Surgeon General for each major force and such added medical troops and installations as the Secretary of National Defense determines necessary for the force command to perform his medical mission. Each of these Surgeons General would have the staff necessary to carry out his mission, medical personnel, specialized and non-specialized, and such units as would be required by each force; and would be responsible for the specialized technical and tactical training of the medical personnel, and for research and development.

There would be complete unification of phases of medical service common to all, and providing at the same time for the Ground Forces, Air Forces, and the Navy types of organic medical service adequate for their special needs.

Continuing his personal statement, General Kirk said: "There are not now nor will there ever be enough competent trained medical, dental, and nursing personnel available to provide the sick, injured and wounded—with the type of medical care demanded for them by the people of this nation, without the strictest economy in the use of personnel."

Court Martial Hearings

House hearings on the proposal to raise the Army court martial system consisted this week of statements by Mr. Frank Ludwig, Supreme Judge of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity; Mr. Arthur E. Farmer, Chairman of the Committee on Military Law of the War Veterans Bar Association; and Col. Ralph G. Boyd, President of the Judge Advocates Association.

All of them stated that the consensus of opinion of the members of their organizations favored most of the amendments contained in the bill under consideration. All agreed, however, that the appointing authority should be limited to bringing charges against personnel and to appointing the trial judge advocate; all else involved in a court martial, special or general, to be vested in the Judge Advocate General's Department; with no order to execute a sentence to be issued until the findings of a court had been reviewed by the JAG. In the latter respect all witnesses took issue with the provision of the bill which would place the Judge Advocate General's Department in the chain of command, whereas the witnesses favored taking that Department out from the influence of the appointing command.

Advocated by the Judge Advocates Association through Colonel Boyd were the following items: that promotion of JAG officers should not be under the authority of command officers; that the JAG should have authority to set aside or reduce sentences; that "an honest-to-goodness" Law Department should be set up in the Army; that the officers of the JAG Department should be on a separate list and should be paid adequately; and that the Judge Advocate General should be responsible only to the Secretary of War, the Under Secretary of War, and the President.

10-year transition period would be inoperative.

"During the transition period, won't your attrition affect Reserve and temporary officers almost exclusively?" the Navy was asked. "Consequently, these temporary officers will, in effect, be a 'cushion' protecting Regular Navy officers against forthcoming reductions in the size of the Navy."

Although the Navy has readily admitted that this is so, it has pointed out that the Reserve officers will enter on periods of active duty with forehand knowledge that their service may be terminated at the close of any fiscal year.

Mr. Harlow asserted that because of such uncertainty, the Navy would be unable to procure the services of capable Reserve officers having personal responsibilities, and, similarly, that officers willing to forego civilian careers under such conditions would not be the kind of officer the Navy should seek.

Mr. Harlow's belief that the ranks of the Regular Navy should be filled now from among Reserve and Temporary officers of World War II also received support of Mr. Vinson, who suggested that the transition period might well be reduced from ten to five years. The transition period, under Navy proposals, would permit a gradual and orderly reduction in the size of the officer corps.

Representative Vinson asked why the Navy seeks to enact promotion legislation which would not become effective for ten years. He said that Titles I and II of the bill, treating of permanent promotion of the line and staff corps, would not become effective until 1 Jan. 1957, or when the officer corps reaches 95% of its authorized strength, and that the temporary provisions of Title III would serve the Navy until that time.

Although Mr. Harlow's questions will be answered in writing and inserted in the record of hearings, progress on the Navy bill was impeded this week by repetitious questioning of Navy Department representatives and occasional discussions of topics related to broad National Defense policies.

The subcommittee on personnel resumed hearings on 22 April to conduct a section-by-section analysis of the Navy bill, but at week's end had only begun this task. Representative W. G. Andrews (R-N. Y.), chairman of the full House Committee, and Representative Vinson, both of whom had missed the first three days of hearings on the Navy bill, attended this week's sessions and led the interrogation of Navy representatives.

Representative Vinson re-introduced the subject of Commodores. Rear Adm. Thomas L. Sprague, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, repeated an earlier request that the subcommittee await the appearances of Secretary Forrestal and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, USN, on this subject before arriving at a decision on this issue.

Nevertheless, the draft of a bill providing for re-establishment of the grade of Commodore has been printed for use of the personnel subcommittee. The committee print contains other changes from the original draft, including provisions called to the attention of the Navy by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL as the result of its survey of officer comments.

An amendment also limits the number of officers who may be picked up from below the promotion zone for accelerated promotion to five per cent of the number of vacancies, or to one if such a computation results in a fraction under one.

Section 422 of the committee print, providing for the grade of Commodore, is quoted:

"(a) The grade of commodore, on the active list of the Navy is hereby established and no further appointments to that grade shall be made in the naval service pursuant to the Act of 9 April 1943 (57 Stat. 50).

"(b) Effective on the 1st day of the sixth month following the date of approval of this Act the annual base pay of a brigadier general of the Army or the Marine Corps and of a commodore of the Navy shall be $7,700; and the annual base pay of a rear admiral of the Navy shall be $8,800. Each such officer shall also be entitled to the money allowances for subsistence and rental of quarters authorized in sections 5 and 6 of the Act of 16 June 1942 (56 Stat. 350), as amended.

"(c) The second paragraph of section 7 of the Act of 16 June 1942 (56 Stat. 350), as amended, is hereby further amended, effective on the 1st day of the sixth month following the date of approval of this Act, to read as follows:

"Officers of the Navy serving in the grade of vice admiral, officers of the Army serving in the grade of lieutenant general, and officers of the other services mentioned in the title of this Act serving in corresponding grades, shall be entitled, while so serving, to the pay and allowances of a rear admiral of the Navy and to a personal money allowance of $500 a year. Officers of the Navy serving in the grade of admiral or as Chief of Naval Operations, officers of the Army serving in the grade of general or as Chief of Staff of the Army, and officers of the other services mentioned in the title of this Act serving in corresponding grades, shall be entitled, while so serving, to the pay and allowances of a rear admiral of the Navy and to a personal money allowance of $2,200 per year."

"(d) The retired pay of any officer of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps retired prior to the effective date of subsection (b) of this section shall not be increased by virtue of the provisions of this section."

Mr. Vinson called on the Navy to justify the need for 269 flag officers which the Navy bill would authorize. Admiral Sprague explained that the growth of the Navy had created administrative duties in billets requiring flag rank, and said he would insert in the record a list of all flag officer billets contemplated for the post-war Navy.

Chairman Andrews interposed a discussion on rank ceilings in each of the Armed Forces, declaring that the time has come to decide whether the top man in each arm should be of four- or five-star rank, and whether other officers should be permitted to hold the same grade.

Precedent establishes that the Chief of Staff of the Army and the Chief of Naval Operations be top men in each of their services, Mr. Andrews said, and whether or not unification is enacted, a policy should be determined in regard to what grade and rank they and an Air Force counterpart should hold.

"This matter should be discussed with the two Secretaries and with the recommendations of the Departments," he said. Admiral Sprague had expressed the Navy view that the Chief of Naval Operations, whether having more stars than other officers or not, is regarded as the senior officer of the Navy by virtue of his position.

Representative Vinson echoed Mr. Andrews' request that a "top rank" be established. Both agreed that there are too many four-star Generals and Admirals.

Comdr. D. L. Martineau, USN, who is representing the Navy's bill to the subcommittee, said that of the 46,000 officer strength approved by the Budget Bureau for fiscal year 1948, only 27,000 are permanent USN officers of the line and staff. Of the 31,000 line officers allowed for fiscal '48, he said, only 21,000 are USN line officers, including 2,500 EDO, AEDO, and SDO officers.

"We have essentially completed our transfer program," he declared, and the Navy would like to stop all transfers into the Regular Navy above the grade of Ensign.

Admiral Sprague estimated that at the end of the war, every officer was about five years ahead of himself on a normal career basis. The terms of service will best be stabilized, he said, by bringing new officers into the Navy as Ensigns.

Representative Vinson said he found "no fault at all" with the accelerated promotions during the war, and believes that the higher rank now held by Naval officers was earned in war service.

Chief of Staff's Board

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, last week revealed in a talk before the American Society of Newspaper Editors that he has organized a board of "young and able officers" to concentrate on the subject of atomic energy and keep him informed of its military phases.

The names of these officers have not been made public. They are under orders to devote their time to the problems of atomic warfare. General Eisenhower said that the function of the board is to keep the Army high command from letting the methods obscure the atomic threat.

Extra Pay for Doctors

The War Department this week asked Congress to provide additional pay and increased rank to induce Reserve and civilian medical personnel to accept commissions in the Regular Army, and to expand the Reserve components.

By the terms of the bill, the pay of officers with less than 30 years of active Federal commissioned service or commissioned within 5 years of enactment of the bill, would be increased by $100 a month aside from increases provided by other laws; specialists would be given an additional 25 per cent increase. The increases, however, would not be counted in the computation of retired pay.

New features in the Medical Department would be the establishing of 4 professorships; the commissioning of certain physicians and surgeons qualified as specialists; and the employing, without regard to Civil Service requirements, of civilian physicians to serve with the Medical Department at annual salaries from $3,640 to $9,800 per year. Specialists in this group would be given the added 25 per cent with a maximum of $11,000 annually. The hours and conditions of employment of the last group would be determined by the Secretary of War. In addition, without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, the Secretary of War would have authority to employ physicians and surgeons "on a temporary full-time, part-time, or fee basis."

The complete letter of the Secretary of War, requesting the legislation, follows:

"There is enclosed herewith a draft of a bill 'To provide for the procurement of physicians and surgeons in the Medical Corps of the Army and for other purposes,' which the War Department recommends be enacted into law.

"This bill embodies the specific recommendations made by the Secretary of War's Medical Advisory Committee. This committee is made up of outstanding leaders in civilian medicine who served as professional consultants to The Surgeon General and in the various overseas theaters during the war.

"Title I would amend the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942, as amended, by providing a $1,200 increase in the base and longevity pay of officers of the Medical Corps who have less than 30 years active Federal commissioned service. The increase in pay would not be included in computing the amount of increase in pay provided by any other provision of law nor would it be counted in the computation of retired pay. Title II would amend the Pay Readjustment Act by providing a 25 per centum in the active duty base and longevity pay of officers of the Medical Corps who are designated as specialists by the Secretary of War. The increase in pay provided by this title would not be included in computing the amount of increase in pay provided by any other provision of law and such increase would not be counted in the computation of retired pay. The increase of pay would not be paid concurrently with flight, parachute or glider pay. Officers could be designated as specialists if they are certified as specialists by an American Specialty Board, recognized by the Advisory Board for Medical Specialists, and by the Surgeon General. Title III would establish in the Medical Department of the Army four professorships to be appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The four professors would have the title and status of professor and the rank by assimilation of brigadier general or major general. The President could terminate at any time the appointment of any professor. Professors not appointed from the Regular Army whose appointments are terminated prior to completion of two years service would receive severance pay equal to two months active duty pay multiplied by the years of service as professor, any fractional part of a year amounting to six months or more would be counted as a full year for purposes of computing severance pay. A professor not appointed from the Regular Army with more than two years service as professor at the time of termination would be retired in the grade held at the time of such termination and with retired pay equal to 2½ per centum of active duty pay multiplied by the number of years by which his age exceeds 28 years. Such retired pay could not exceed 75 per centum of active duty pay. Except as noted above professors would be retired or separated as now or hereafter provided for retirement or separation of Regular Army officers. Title IV would permit the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate to appoint and commission in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army certain physicians and surgeons qualified as specialists in a grade, not to exceed that of colonel, appropriate to their special qualifications. Title V would authorize the Secretary of War to employ, without regard to Civil Service requirements, civilian physicians to serve with the Medical Department at annual salaries ranging from $3,640 to $9,800 per annum. Provision is made for designation as specialist with an increase of 25 per centum of such pay. No one would receive more than $11,000 per annum. The Secretary of War would be authorized to prescribe the hours and conditions of employment and leaves of absence of persons employed under this title. The Secretary of War would be authorized to employ without regard to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, physicians and surgeons on a temporary full-time, part-time, or fee basis.

"Title I in providing additional compensation for Medical Corps officers will facilitate the procurement of physicians in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army and of the Reserve components. Without providing some additional compensation, the Army will be unable to meet the existing competition of civilian medical practice. The increase of $1,200 per year is deemed necessary to reimburse the Medical Corps officer for the cost of his extensive professional education and loss of earnings during such education, and to bring his earnings into line with those of promotion list officers over a 30 year period. An example of the current trend in the procurement of physicians is evident upon examination of the War Department's first integration program for the Regular Army. Of 110,000 applications received 510 medical officers applied and of these only 210 were commissioned.

"Title II would assist in the procurement of Medical Corps specialists. The procurement of medical specialists is an acute problem. Many civilian doctors are now specialists in some medical specialty and are so certified by an appropriate American Specialty Board. The civilian income of these recognized specialists is much higher than that of general practitioners. Without providing some additional compensation for specialists, the Army will be unable to meet the competition of civilian practice. The Veterans' Administration has taken advantage of the Act of 3 January 1946, Public Law 293, 79th Congress, which authorizes 25 per centum additional pay for qualified medical specialists. The proposed legislation offers remuneration on a basis comparable to civilian practice. The Secretary of War's Medical Advisory Committee, which is composed of the outstanding men in the medical field today, strongly recommends that such action be taken in increasing pay of Medical Corps specialists.

"Appointment of Medical Corps specialists at ages over 45 and in grades higher than major, as provided by Title IV, will assist in the procurement of outstanding specialists. The Secretary of War's Medical Advisory Committee feels that it would be impossible for the Medical Corps, Regular Army, to obtain any outstanding, highly competent specialists from civilian life if their rank were limited to that of major. It is believed necessary that recognition be given to professional attainments, and that such attainments should be considered in designating the grade in which specialists are appointed in the Regular Army.

"Employment of civilian physicians under Title V is deemed necessary in the event that the War Department is unable to secure an adequate number of qualified physicians in a military status. These physicians will be used not only as consultants, but will actually participate in the treatment of patients. In addition, they will formulate professional policies and participate in or conduct teaching programs. The Secretary of War's Medical Advisory Committee was very strong in its belief that without the assistance of civilians in the present emergency, the Medical Department cannot possibly discharge its responsibilities adequately. The extent to which civilians must actually assume a portion of the workload as attending physicians and surgeons will be determined by the rate of integration of competent officers in the Medical Corps. This title is comparable to Public Law 293, 79th Congress, cited above.

"It is estimated that the annual cost to the Government will be approximately as follows:

"Title I, $3,300,000 based on an assumed strength of 2,750 officers in the Medical Corps.

"Title II, $960,000 based on an assumption that 30 per centum of 825 officers of the Medical Corps will qualify as specialists.

"Title III, $38,500 for the first fiscal year.

"Title IV. The War Department is unable to estimate accurately the increased cost to the Government since it is not known how many specialists will be appointed pursuant to this title, nor is it known in what grades they will be appointed.

"Title V. The War Department is unable to estimate accurately the increased cost to the Government, since the number and pay grades of the civilians to be appointed pursuant to this title is not known.

"The Bureau of the Budget has been consulted and advises the War Department that, 'subject to your consideration of the advisability of revising the proposed legislation to limit the $100 monthly increase in compensation for thirty years to those officers already in the service or those who enter the service during the five years following the enactment of the legislation, there would be no objection by this office to the presentation of the proposed legislation for the consideration of the Congress.'"

Comments on Army Bill

Following are some of the comments written to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL by officers of the Army on the new promotion bill proposed by the War Department.

Copies of all comments and suggestions sent to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will be turned over to the members of the Senate and House Committees on Armed Services. These copies will contain no identification of the individual officers submitting them. The originals will be kept strictly confidential in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL's offices.

Major SigC—"In the 5 April, 1947, issue of your Journal you stated that Rep. Dewey Short, chairman of the House subcommittee on personnel in the Armed Services, had expressed amazement at the fact that he had received only a handful of criticisms of the Navy's proposed promotion plan.

"In the 10 April 1947 issue Rep. Short is quoted as having said, 'The Navy has had selection for 30 years, and the War Department is coming around to it.'

"What amazes me is the apparent failure of Rep. Short and other committee members to draw a most obvious inference from the above facts. 'The Navy has had selection for 30 years. . . . ' 'There has been very little criticism of the Navy's proposed promotion plan. . . . '

"The inference is clear. . . . After 30 years of promotion by selection, Naval officers have learned that it does not pay to criticize acts of their superiors!

"The most determined and ingenious efforts of the most capable persons could not conceivably hope to draft a promotion plan for an organization as large and heterogeneous as our Navy and expect to please everyone. The War and Navy Depts. have frequently stated as much. Yet here is a plan which is bound to affect the lives and careers of thousands of naval officers, and the criticisms are a mere handful. Something is wrong.

"That something is the accumulation of 30 years' of experience with promotion by selection. The officer corps of the Navy is painfully aware of the limitations on free speech and individual enterprise which are inherent in a system of promotion such as that employed by the Navy and presently being advocated for the Army. The individual officers are not so sure that their names might not somehow be linked with written criticisms, but they are quite sure that should such a thing happen it would not be forgotten at the next meeting of the Selection Board.

"The Army has done well to steer clear of the selection system for the past 30 years, and will do well to continue to do so."

"A staff which always agrees with the commander is not only useless to the commander (and the Service) . . . it is detrimental to both. Yet that is exactly what we engender when we base professional advancement upon a system so susceptible to politics and personal animosities.

Captain, VC: "Medical Department officers now being integrated will lose two years toward promotion (i.e. 14 years to be Majors as opposed to 12 years under present plan). Officers already integrated accepted RA commissions on this basis, and should not be penalized by a new plan of which they had no knowledge at time of acceptance."

Lt. Colonel, DC: "I favor the bill as drafted. As a whole a very excellent bill. The constructive service allowance will still leave pre-war regulars penalized in rank as compared to those brought in by integration."

1st Lieutenant, FA: "I favor the bill as drafted. Failed to find in bill provision to allow pre-integration RA officers credit where applicable for constructive service as was thus establishing the organization of the new headquarters. Upon completion of these new assignments it was then possible to bring about a consolidation of the Post of Fort Benning and The Infantry Center headquarters. This second action brought Army Ground Forces installations and Seventh Army units under one staff composed of the same personnel with which they had previously operated, and at the same time eliminated the three separate headquarters, placing them all under The Infantry Center.

The Infantry Center headquarters, which is the high command at Fort Benning is now located in The Infantry School building with certain of the center's activities and offices of several special staff sections housed in the old Post Headquarters building which is known as the Headquarters Annex. The annex includes offices for the Judge Advocate General, Personnel Affairs, Enlisted Men's Pay and Records Section, and the Public Relations Office.

The Infantry School instructional departments are still located in The Infantry School Building, but the consolidation has provided additional space for the varied activities of the school. The General Section has spread over the entire wing just above the school's library while the Army extension Course Section is now using the entire ground floor of the same wing. This expansion has relieved the overcrowded conditions under which these sections formerly operated, with the result that more efficient methods are employed.

Units and activities now under The Infantry Center are The Infantry School, Army Ground Forces Board No. 3, School Troops, The Student Training Regiment, The Airborne Regiment, The Infantry School Detachment, 3440th ASU, The 25th Infantry, 999th FA Battalion, 571st FA Bn, 1290th Engineer Combat Battalion, and other units such as the 72nd Army Ground Forces Band.

The organization of the Infantry Center and the consolidation of Headquarters at Fort Benning has gone far toward the conversion of a wartime factory which manufactured capable platoon leaders to a school with a peacetime mission of turning out fully qualified and well rounded graduates.

given RA officers integrated in 1946. If applied to my case I would, in mid-1946, be credited with 5 years' constructive service; whereas I have only 4 years' actual commissioned service. Is this inequity going to be corrected?"

Colonel, CmlC: "I favor the bill as drafted. Should pass this session of Congress."

Colonel, Inf: "I favor selection out and not selection up. This bill will break morale of officers. It appears to be designed to favor temporary General officers of low rank."

Colonel, AC: "Recommend lowering percentage of General officers and colonels to 1/2 of 1 per cent and 6 per cent respectively and increasing percentages of majors and captains by these reductions. Section 19 is too restrictive as to rates for eligibility. Sec. 12A provides for immediate advancement of temporary general officers on permanent list."

Lt. Colonel, USA-Ret.: "Encourages favoritism, politics, handshaking, etc."

Colonel, FD: "I favor the bill as drafted. A fine bill, showing much thought and study to a very complex problem."

Colonel, GSC-Inf: "I favor the bill as drafted with exceptions: Everything depends upon development of fair methods of evaluation of ability and assurance that selections will be made on that basis. The method used for selection of Colonels and Generals to be reduced indicates that the pen is still mightier than the sword. Consider the number of Division Commanders who were reduced while those who won their stars in a swivel chair still wear them. Will we have to compete for favors? Consider Hyasong versus Dalquist, etc."

Lt. Colonel, Ord: "I favor the bill as drafted because it provides for advancement by demonstrated ability, a required factor in any system of promotion."

Lt. Colonel, FA: "Will create the greatest era of bootlicking the army has even seen."

Captain, AC: "The bill as drafted places each officer on a 30-year probation. The merit system for promotion will put us back to the wartime apple-polishing system that is so abhorrent to any self-respecting officer. With a system of eliminating the units and proper placement of officers in accordance with abilities and training the army can protect itself."

Colonel, AC: "There should be some provision made to allow constructive credit for commissioned service for flying cadets who served on active duty because of economy measures 1934-37."

Colonel, FA: "I favor the bill as drafted, generally. Provision should be made for retirement of non-regulars after 30 years of 'service' same as for regulars. A small amount of 'constructive' active duty credit should be given all non-regulars for every year in which they held an active reserve commission. Officers of the National Guard should not be permitted in time of peace to come back to Reserve Corps in any rank they may have advanced to in the Guard beyond that they would have attained had they remained in the ORC. This because promotion through politics and otherwise in Guard frequently is much more rapid than in the ORC. I know an officer who, through Guard politics, went from a 2nd Lieutenant to a Brigadier General in 12 years."

Captain, FA: "Section 8 should be rewritten to include the specific causes for rejection, otherwise the door is open for politics."

1st Lt., USA-Ret.: "In 'selection' for promotion, there would be too much chance for all kinds of politics and favoritism. However, some provision could be made for the rapid advancement of bona fide genius generals' sons, congressmen's relatives, etc., without turning the normal, ordinary work-a-day officers corps inside out every so often. Many a military 'success' of today would be a dismal failure if he had to recruit his own personnel."

Major, FD: "I do not believe it fair to take older officers into the RA and by selection upon supposed inability as variously determined by sometimes prejudiced officers to then throw them out into civilian life with the meagre allowances proposed by Section 16(e) (3) at age 45 to 60 years."

Major, Inf: "A 29-year-old officer on continuous active duty since July 1939 who was granted a RA commission (in July '46) gets no promotion credit for the years of 1939, 1940 and 1941 (up to 7 December). Why?"

Lt. Colonel, FD: "I favor the bill as drafted. I believe the subject has been thoroughly studied and the bill as drafted is feasible."

Major, AC: "I favor the bill as drafted. A selective system for promotion has been needed for a long time."

Colonel, AC: "Rank and retirement credit should be given to Regular Army officers integrated before December 1945 for previous commissioned service as a rated flying cadet on active duty (subsequent to graduation from service schools)."

1st Lieutenant, AC: "I favor the bill as drafted. (1) Provision should be made to exclude any chance of favoritism on selection boards because of the officer up for consideration being or not being a graduate of West Point. (2) Provision should be made that no officer with an efficiency rating less than excellent would be eligible for promotion. (3) All officers promoted to the grade of Brig. Gen. or higher who are to serve as generals in the Air Corps should be Air Corps officers, selected from the Air Corps list, so that officers qualified to command Air Corps units would be selected. Effort should be made to select young officers."

Lt. Colonel, Inf: "Proposed system would lead to favoritism and also boot-licking by officers to get ahead."

Lt. Colonel, Inf: "Will create favoritism. Will make 'Yes' men. Will be destructive to morale. No one except fair-haired boys and favorites will have any security. Already plenty of machinery to rid unit, if used. Will create a vicious throat-cutting, dog-eat-dog condition."

Captain, AC: "I favor the bill as drafted. With exception to Section 7—Under the provisions of this section those who were commissioned prior to becoming 21 stand to lose seniority on the promotion list because this time is not credited. In a good many cases this was war service and would be lost."

Colonel, AC: "The differences in peacetime organizations and missions of the Air Force and Army are as great as of the Army and Navy. The Air Force should have a separate promotion bill to solve its peculiar troubles."

"This bill does not give just treatment to those former Air Reserve Officers who were given regular commissions prior to 1940."

"Comment No. 2—Section 19, paragraph a, offers provisions to give credit for all active federal commissioned service to those officers integrated into the Regular Army subsequent to 7 December 1941. I can find no provisions in this bill to credit Regular Army officers with active commissioned service in the Reserve who were integrated into the Regular Army prior to 7 December 1941. This service likewise should be considered."

Lt. Colonel, GSC: "The Bill as drafted is unfair to many officers integrated in 1946-47 who, by the terms of the bill are given no credit for service prior to 7 December 1941. Included in this category are many former Thomason Act officers and AAF Reserve officers. Section 19 of the bill should be revised accordingly."

Limit Top Navy Rank

The Navy Department will soon introduce legislation permitting only 15 per cent of the Navy's flag officers to serve in the grades of Vice Admiral and Admiral, with a numerical ceiling of eight full Admirals.

Such a bill is now under study by the Budget Bureau. Rear Adm. Thomas L. Sprague, USN, Chief of Naval Personnel, told the House subcommittee on personnel in the Armed Services on 23 April that the Budget Bureau has stricken a Navy proposal that the Chief of Naval Operations be a Fleet Admiral.

The bill preserves the present organization of the Office of CNO, now operative under authority of Executive Order, by permanently authorizing Deputy Chiefs of Naval Operations for Air, Administration, Logistics, Operations, and Personnel; and Assistant Chiefs.

Although this bill does not prescribe ranks to be held by flag officers serving in any of these billets, Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) said he will re-introduce legislation providing that Bureau Chiefs and Deputy Chiefs of Naval Operations hold the grade of Vice Admiral after one year's service in those posts.

Pre-war statutes limit the number of full Admirals to four. It is planned that the following billets will be for four-star Admirals: Chief of Naval Operations, Vice Chief of Naval Operations, CNO's representative on the Military Staff Committee of the Security Council of the United Nations, the chairman of the General Board, Commanders-in-Chief of the Atlantic and Pacific Fleets, and Commanders of U. S. Naval Forces in Europe and the Western Pacific.

With a line strength of 31,000 officers having been approved by the Budget Bureau in the Navy Department's 1948 appropriations bill, the Navy would be permitted 222 flag officers next year. If this measure were enacted, the Navy would be permitted eight Admirals and 15 Vice Admirals.

On 1 April, the Navy had nine Admirals and 30 Vice Admirals on its active list.

Board of Visitors to USNA

The Board of Visitors to the U. S. Naval Academy was asked this week to give special consideration to the Academy's physical problems arising out of long-range expansion and to meet needs of the near future.

Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, jr., USN, Superintendent of the Academy, told the Board in a welcoming address 21 April, "I refer to long range expansion and, within that pattern, the step-by-step expansion including our airfield."

The Board of Visitors conducted its annual four-day inspection from 21-24 April. The Board was subdivided into four committees, which made a complete inspection of the Academic Departments and Activities.

The Committees sat in on Midshipmen's recitations in several classes, and visited on board the USS Kearsarge, which was anchored in Annapolis Roads.

Of the role of the Naval Academy, Admiral Holloway told the Board of Visitors:

"We believe the Naval Academy should represent the ultimate in professional and personal standards, and that it and its graduates should be a tremendous binding force in the creation of a solidarity of loyalty and ideals of service in the Navy as a whole. We believe it fitting that the Naval Academy assume this role."

Admiral Holloway said the Academy curriculum is designed to provide a "broad, general education strongly pointed to the naval life," adding:

"We believe that we should recognize that the Naval Academy is a first step, and though an important one, only the first, in a broad educational schematic that extends throughout the career of the naval officer. Hence, we need not feel we must incorporate each and every detail of naval knowledge at the undergraduate level but must hold to fundamentals and leave certain higher educational processes and specialties to graduate education."

"The importance of aviation as a fundamental professional category such as seamanship or gunnery has been recognized by its incorporation in the Academic Calendar to the extent of about one hundred hours."

Comments on Navy Bill

The following comments on the Navy Department's proposed promotion bill have been received by the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Copies of all comments and suggestions sent to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL will be turned over to the members of the Senate and House Committees on Armed Services. These copies will contain no identification of the individual officers submitting them. The originals will be kept strictly confidential in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL's offices.

Comdr.: "I oppose the bill as drafted. Although the bill advances the time at which an officer would normally be promoted to Captain, the periods of service should be reduced further so that this rank will be reached at a younger age."

"In my own case, after two years of college and four years at the Naval Academy, I graduated at the age of 23.8 years. I would be eligible for Captain at 48.8 years—too old."

Lt. Comdr.: "I believe the bill is an improvement on the present system, but feel that it could be considerably improved by instituting a much greater attrition rate through the grade of Lieutenant and a much smaller attrition rate in the senior grades, provided a more liberal retirement compensation plan be adopted for officers retired as Lt. Comdr. and above. Advantages would be, primarily: (1) to provide a greater incentive for senior officers to devote themselves to the good of the Navy first and to their own careers second. In the more senior grades the two purposes are often incompatible, while in the junior grades they tend to be complementary. (2) Would require greater number of officers to be commissioned as Ensigns with consequent broadening of the field from which to select the most capable officers. The main disadvantage would be (1) less average experience per officer, and (2) if carried too far it would make officer procurement difficult."

Lt. (jg): "... I favor the bill as drafted. I especially favor the limited duty officer provision. This provision will allow the Navy to keep the best of its temporary USN-T officers, which the Navy Department has credited with an outstanding job during this past war. It also would act as a powerful incentive to ambitious and qualified enlisted men to make the Navy a permanent career."

Comdr.: "I favor the bill as drafted, subject to further comment... Section 312 (g), concerning retirement of officers below the rank of rear admiral continues the kicking around that former Aviation Cadets and others who transferred to the Regular Navy prior to passage of Public Law No. 347 have been getting in the matter of terminal leave, or accumulated leave, and the Aviation Cadet 'bonus.' This section as it stands makes no provisions for us to be retired on 50% pay if we are retired as commanders or captains prior to putting in twenty years of service, but it does permit those officers who transferred to the Regular Navy under Public Law 347 to be so retired."

"Those of us who, for one reason or another, decided to join the Regular Navy under the Aviation Cadet Act of 1941 or similar provisions (for Supply Corps and NROTC officers) prior to the big campaign of 1946 to get us to join, now find that we have lost our promised $500 per year Aviation Cadet bonus (which was OK — the Navy was giving us permanent jobs) AND all of our accumulated leave prior to the date of our being sworn in to the Regular Navy. Those who came in under Public Law 347 did not lose that leave. (Please turn to Next Page)

Navy Promotion Bill

FOLLOWING is a continuation from last week's ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of the text of the Navy Department's proposed "Navy and Marine Corps Officers' Promotion Act of 1947."

Title I, published in THE ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL of 15 March, treated of the permanent provisions relating to officers of the Line. Title II, published 22 March, covered the permanent provisions relating to officers of the Staff Corps.

The following continues publication of Title III, treating of the terminable provisions of temporary rank relating to all officers of the Navy on active duty.

DETERMINATION OF UPPER AND LOWER HALF REAR ADMIRALS

Sec. 315. Rear admirals on the active list of the line in the upper half of that grade, exclusive of officers carried as additional numbers in grade, shall be entitled to the pay and allowances prescribed by law for rear admirals of the upper half: Provided, That for the purpose of determining the number of rear admirals in the upper half, there shall be excluded those officers carried as additional numbers in that grade, and each rear admiral carried as an additional number in that grade shall be entitled to such pay and allowances from the date on which the officer next junior to him becomes entitled thereto pursuant to this section: And provided further, That for the purposes of determining the number of rear admirals in the upper half, an officer serving in the grade of admiral or vice admiral shall be regarded as serving in the grade to which he would be entitled other than by virtue of his appointment in the grade of admiral or vice admiral.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS

Sec. 316. (a) No officer serving in warrant grade shall be temporarily advanced to chief warrant officer until he shall have completed six years of service in warrant or higher grade.

(b) So much of paragraphs 1 and 3 of subsection (c) of section 5 of the Act of April 18, 1946 (Public Law 347, Seventy-ninth Congress, second session), as relates to the assignment or reassignment of running mates to officers in the Staff Corps is hereby repealed.

(c) Nothing in this title shall be held to confer permanent commissioned status in the Regular Navy or Marine Corps upon any Reserve officer or any person temporarily appointed to the grade of ensign or above from a grade or rating below ensign.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the President is authorized to terminate any temporary appointment effected pursuant to authority contained herein.

(e) Upon the termination of this title, officers serving in a grade by virtue of temporary appointment therein may continue to so serve until a vacancy occurs for their permanent appointment therein and officers upon a promotion list for temporary promotion to the next higher grade shall be held and considered to be on the promotion list for permanent promotion thereto.

(f) A failure of selection for temporary promotion to any grade pursuant to the provisions of this title shall be deemed, in the cases of officers holding permanent appointments in the Regular Navy, to also constitute a failure of selection for permanent promotion to that grade.

(g) Nothing in this title shall be held to reduce the grade or rank held by any officer on the date of approval of this Act under permanent appointment therein.

(h) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, no captain who will have twenty-one or more years of total commissioned service on June 30 next after the date of approval of this Act shall be placed on the retired list pursuant to the provisions of this title until he shall have twice failed of selection for promotion to the grade of rear admiral in the approved reports of selection boards convened pursuant to the provisions of the Act approved June 23, 1938 (52 Stat. 944), as amended, or of this Act.

(i) All officers holding permanent appointments on the active list of the Regular Navy who received their last permanent promotions as "best fitted", "fitted and retained", or "fitted" shall no longer be so characterized, designated, or described, but shall be regarded as having received such promotions pursuant to the recommendation of a selection board as prescribed in this act.

(j) Any officer serving in the grade of rear admiral or below under authority of this title by virtue of a temporary appointment therein shall, if retired while so serving, be retired in the grade in which serving with retired pay based on the active-duty pay to which he was entitled at the time of retirement unless otherwise entitled to higher retired grade or pay.

(k) In effecting temporary promotions pursuant to the provisions of this title, the provisions of law relative to the mental, moral, and professional examination of officers prior to promotion shall not be applicable to officers not holding permanent appointments on the active list of the Regular Navy but shall be applicable to officers holding such appointments. Officers having successfully passed such examination for temporary promotion to a grade shall not again be examined for permanent appointment in that grade.

(l) The President is authorized, in his discretion, to affirm the temporary appointments of warrant and commissioned warrant officers who are serving as such on the effective date of this Act pursuant to the authority of the Act of July 24, 1941 (55 Stat. 603), as amended. Upon such affirmation such appointment shall thereafter be considered as having been effected pursuant to the authority contained in this title.

This discrimination in retirement provisions, though I personally don't expect to have them apply to me, is about to be the straw that breaks the camel's back."

Comdr.: "I favor the bill as drafted. In my opinion the proposed legislation is excellent and fits the needs of the service."

Navy Uniform Changes

A parachutist insignia for authorized officers and enlisted personnel is among important changes contained in a new Chapter II, U. S. Navy Uniform Regulations, 1947.

The parachutist insignia is a silver device approximately 1½ inches long and three-fourths high consisting of an open parachute flanked on either side by curved wings. It may be worn by personnel designated parachutists in accordance with BuPers Manual.

Personnel may wear the insignia together with the aviation insignia, but the aviation insignia is to be worn uppermost. When worn with ribbons, the aviation insignia will be worn above and the parachutist insignia below the ribbons.

Changes in officers' uniform regulations include the following:

1. Blue and white garrison caps may not be worn after 1 June.
2. Black sleeve stripes on overcoats are not required at the present time.
3. Half lace on the sleeves of blue uniforms is optional until 16 Oct. 1948.

You'll get special attention from Army and Navy Journal advertisers—they cater to Service personnel.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE Coast Guard will participate in an International Meeting on Marine Radio Aids to Navigation to be held in New York and New London beginning 28 April. The Academy will be host for a portion of the program.

Delegates have been invited from 57 maritime nations of the world. Capt. Harold C. Moore, USCG, will be the Coast Guard delegate to the U. S. Delegation. The IMMRRAN program coordinator is Lt. Comdr. Loren E. Brunner, USCG, of Coast Guard Headquarters.

The basic purpose of IMMRRAN is the presentation of broad and objective views of the world radio aids to marine navigation problems and suggested solutions to the problems.

New London has been selected for shipboard demonstrations because of good permanent radio aids to navigation just outside the harbor and the installation of special radar beacon and radar reflector buoy equipment.

The Cutter Campbell will proceed to and from sea with demonstration equipment and guests. A welcoming address will be given by Rear Adm. James Pine, USCG, Superintendent of the Coast Guard Academy.

In New York, American manufacturers will exhibit loran, radar, radio beacon timers, VMF radio telephone, fathometers, and other marine navigational equipment.

Leading scientists and engineers will be joined in the lecture program by the following Coast Guard officers:

Rear Adm. Earl G. Rose, Chief, Office of Operations, Headquarters; Capt. Lawrence M. Harding, Chief, Electronics Engineering Division, Headquarters; Comdr. Peter V. Colmar, Electronics Instructor, Coast Guard Academy; Comdr. Earl K. Rhodes, Asst. Chief, Communications Div., Headquarters; Comdr. Oscar C. Rohnke, Commanding Officer, USCGC Campbell; Comdr. Van A. Graves, Chief, Aerology and Oceanography Div., Headquarters; Lt. Comdr. Guy L. Ottinger, Asst. Chief, Electronics Engineering Division, Headquarters; and Lt. Comdr. Clarence N. Daniel, Asst. Chief, Aids to Navigation Div., Headquarters.

The existing recruiting organization is expected to procure approximately 1000 men between 1 April and 30 June, with quotas of 400 for April and 350 for May.

"Our hopes for the abolition of war must rest on the removal of the causes of war through political action, and not merely on the removal of the military means of making war."—ADM. RICHMOND K. TURNER.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

1. Establishment and protection of peace through maintenance in accordance with our National needs and international commitments, of Regular Establishments organized, equipped and trained to utilize and employ modern materials of war, and coordinated with Industry and Labor kept intimately familiar with the manufacture and supply of such materials.
2. Scientific research to keep our lead in the atom bomb, guided missiles, and biological and radio active agents, and development of methods for their use and for defense against them, plus effective safeguards in secrecy.
3. The building up of the National Guard and Reserve components of the Armed Forces to their Congress and State authorized post-war strengths. Federally equipped, housed, and trained, effectively coordinated with the Regular Services, and with Universal Military Training to maintain their strengths.
4. Protection of active and retired pay to meet rising costs so as to enable maintenance of American standards of living; relief from pay reduction through income taxes; increase in per diem travel allowances; compensation for Service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.
5. Enactment, after ample opportunity for study and comment by Service personnel in the field and with the Fleet, of legislation for orderly promotion systems in the Regular Establishments with recognition of war service and war ranks to prevent stagnation, and to insure the maintenance of high professional standards.
6. Continuance and expansion of Service Schools, including the National War College, Army-Navy Staff College, and the Industrial College.
7. Rank and retirement benefits for former Army enlisted personnel and Warrant Officers who served in war on same basis now accorded those of the other Armed Forces.
8. Upward revision of pension scales to insure Service widows and dependents a living income.

A SYMPATHETIC public will support General Alexander A. Vandegrift's appeal to the Senate Committee on Armed Services to protect the future status of the U. S. Marine Corps in any unification legislation it may recommend. General Vandegrift pointed out that there is nothing in the bill as it is now written to assure continuance of his Corps in the historic role it has so gallantly filled in all our wars. As far as the language of the bill is concerned, General Vandegrift pointed out it would be possible to reduce that historic organization to the status of a ceremonial or police force. Other witnesses assure the committee that there is every intention of preserving and employing the Marine Corps, but insist that to write it in the bill would restrict the scope of the authority of the proposed Secretary of National Defense. Inasmuch as there is no acknowledged plan to hamstring the development of the Marine Corps no harm could be done by embodying in the proposed legislation a definition of its field and functions. The executive order, agreed upon between the War and Navy Departments and to be issued by the President if the bill is enacted, defines the status of the Marine Corps, but, as General Vandegrift points out, it would not have the authority of basic law and could be changed at will. Despite present assurances that the Corps is not to be deprived of its full scope of operations it is quite apparent that some such plans were in the making in the past and there is no guarantee that they will not be revived in the future. The mysterious "1478 series" of papers in the confidential files of the Joint Chiefs of Staff have frequently been alluded to as showing a "clear and unmistakable" intention of destroying the Corps. However, while Secretary of War Patterson told the committee he knew of no reason why these papers should not be brought before the members, they have not yet been revealed. General Vandegrift, of course, is aware of what is in the 1478 file and therefore knows whereon he bases his fears for the future, but can not reveal the details because of silly Service secrecy. The age old function of the Marines as an integral, and powerful, component of Sea Power, is deep rooted in history older than this Nation. The U. S. Marine Corps has made itself so valuable a part of the whole defense structure as well as indispensable to the Navy itself that it is inconceivable there should be any thought of belittling it in the future. The Committee should heed the request of General Vandegrift and write into the law the safeguards necessary to assure preservation of this gallant fighting force.

BEFORE the Senate Finance Committee is a bill amending the income tax law, one provision of which would grant an additional exemption of $500 to all persons over 65 years of age. This is designed to ease the tax burden on those no longer actively engaged in earning wages and now forced to live on retirement pay. We urge the committee, in this connection, to consider the plight of Service personnel retired for age or length of service. While on active duty drawing full pay and allowances they were given a military tax exemption of $1,500 in addition to other normal exemptions. When they passed to the retired list all their allowances were discontinued and their base pay cut to 75 per cent, which taken together results in virtually a 50 per cent reduction in their incomes. Yet the Government sets this critical period to deprive them of the special military exemption and to subject all of their meagre retired pay to the full force of the income tax laws. During their active careers, moving from one post to another at the will of the government, Service personnel have no opportunity to establish permanent domiciles, so, unlike those who retire from civilian pursuits, they when retired, are put to the enormous expense of establishing homes for themselves and their families. It is clearly apparent, particularly in these days of increasing prices, that reduced incomes and higher taxes, force upon them a much lower standard of living, and in many cases, an actual pinchpenny existence. In the case of disabled personnel, the Congress has recognized this situation by authorizing complete exemption of retired pay from income taxes. This recognition should go further and the principle applied to those retired for age or length of Service, for personnel in the latter categories are also disabled in sense that the government has decreed that they are no longer fit for the rigors of active military or naval duty. We urge the Senate Finance Committee to broaden the bill now before it by granting complete exemption from income tax for all personnel retired from the Armed Services.

Back in the days of King Arthur a knight was sent on a long journey. As there was no horse available, he rode a big dog. He was well on his way when it began to rain, so he stopped at a house and asked the owner if he might spend the night there. The owner looked at the huge St. Bernard.

Ike—"I raffled him off. I sold a hundred tickets for a dollar apiece."

Jake—"Yeah? Well, what did the fellow say who won?"

Ike—"Well, he made an awful fuss about it so I gave him his dollar back."

Embarrassing Moment

The lady of the house was entertaining her bridge club friends when the pattering of tiny feet was heard on the stairs. She raised her hand for silence.

"Hush," she cooed softly, "the children are about to deliver their goodnight message. It always gives me such a humble feeling to hear them... Listen!"

There was a moment of silence—then shyly:

"Mamma, Willie found a bed-bug!"

T. L. R.—We have been advised by the War Department that the 30th Infantry Division, including the 82nd Tank Destroyer Battalion which was attached to that division, has been awarded the Belgian fourragere for action occurring 4 Sept. to 10 Sept. 1944, and 17 Jan. to 25 Jan. 1945. The authority for this is Belgian Decree 1393, dated 20 Nov. 1945.

J. I. W.—The Navy Department has advised us that terminal leave promotion actually received while on terminal leave (not an advancement in grade after release from active duty) and before 1 July 1946 is considered the highest temporary grade satisfactorily held under the provisions of Public Law 305, 79th Congress.

G. C. D.—The Reserve Branch of the Adjutant General's Office states that a Reserve Officer who has been transferred to the Enlisted Reserve under the provisions of Public Law 190, 79th Congress, may continue in the ORC even though he is a member of the Enlisted Reserve prior to his final retirement as an enlisted man. As a member of the ORC he will be subject to the same regulations as all other members of the Officers Reserve Corps.

The members of the Engineer Corps of the Navy have rarely, if ever, been tried for incompetency, nor have they failed to show, on all occasions, that they were capable officers. The facts will warrant the statement that not one of the recent accidents to our new ships has been attributed to any incompetency on the part of the engineers of the Navy.

80 Years Ago

Is there any good reason why an officer of the Army should not represent his country as a Minister abroad? Who can be better fitted for such an office than a man who to genius adds the education he acquires at West Point, which every intelligent American is proud to acknowledge as the most perfect institution of learning in the country? The field of politics a true soldier does not wish to enter.

AAF Weather Officer Course

Officers attending the Weather Officer Course at Chanute Field, Ill., receive training in meteorology at the same professional level as that given at civilian universities. The course is 32 weeks in length, plus a ten week advanced course for selected students.

The present prerequisites are three years college credits including mathematics through integral calculus and one year college physics. However, due to the shortage of qualified weather students, consideration is being given to a plan for temporarily lowering prerequisites to two years college credits with mathematics through analytical geometry and one year college physics.

Reserve officers not on active duty should write direct to the Chief, Air Weather Service, Washington 25, D. C., including a transcript of college credits. Those on active duty should apply through command channels to the Chief, Air Weather Service, including a personnel data sheet and transcript of college credits.

After a period of in-station training at an AAF Weather Station the weather officers will be eligible for graduate training in meteorology at selected civilian universities.

Air OCS

Applications are now being received for the next Army Air Forces Officer Candidate School class, Maj. Gen. Fred L. Anderson, Assistant Chief of Air Staff, Personnel, said this week. The class will begin 7 July at San Antonio, Tex.

The class is open for 250 students, who upon graduation will be commissioned in the Air Reserve. Pay while attending the school will be that of a staff sergeant for those below that grade. Those whose present grade is above that of staff sergeant will receive pay commensurate with their grades.

Applications are also open to civilians who are at least 20 years and six months but not over 28 years of age. They must be a citizen of the United States; obtain a score of 110 or higher on the AGCT test; have at least high school education; pass the required physical examination and possess high moral and personal qualifications. An OCS examination will be given and applicants selected on a competitive basis.

XB-48 to be Taxi Tested

The Army Air Forces' new high-speed jet bomber, the Martin XB-48, has been removed from its construction hangar and is ready to begin ground and taxi tests.

The XB-48 spans 108 feet four inches across the wing, has an overall length of 85 feet nine inches, and is 27 feet six inches high. The plane was completed in 14 months, from the first engineering work until it was ready for ground testing.

V-1 and V-2 Called Obsolete

The development of new aircraft and guided missiles has reduced V-1 and V-2 rockets to the status of obsolete weapons, the Army Air Forces said 22 April.

The AAF statement said that AAF technicians are convinced that the only practical use of the V-1 and V-2, in the light of modern scientific advancements, is as research models in the development of new, long-range, supersonic, guided missiles and in the search for defenses against such missiles.

The development of high-speed jet fighters and the new supersonic guided missiles, such as the GAPA rocket, renders the V-1 obsolete due to its slow speed and short range, the statement said.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—The end of the Big Four conference in Moscow was about as predicted, with feeble progress made during its 46 days of debate on either the German or Austrian treaty issues. In both cases Russian insistence upon a maximum of reparations was largely responsible for inaction, for the other three powers were not far apart nor wholly opposed to compromise differences. The net results of the conference are small. Even the pulling-together of the three western powers, welcome as it is, has a tragic overtone insofar as it emphasizes the cleavage between west and east. A last-day agreement by the foreign ministers, to repatriate 1,950,000 German prisoners admittedly still held outside Germany, will reduce somewhat the German discouragement even though completion of this repatriation is not pledged before the end of 1948. Nearly half the prisoner-total is admitted by Russia which reported 800,000 Germans in captivity. France reports 612,000 and admits concern over giving them up at a time when their work is still greatly needed for French economy—the hope being that a good many will stay in France voluntarily. Great Britain holds 435,000. The United States still holds only 15,000, none of them in this country save for a handful in the toils of the law awaiting trial or undergoing punishment. The total held in the U. S. zones of Europe was 24,000 last February. It has been cut 10,000 since then, and may be at zero by 1 July next.

Although there will be no final action until after the House adds its expected approval next week to the Senate's endorsement of the President's Greek-Turkish aid bill, the War and Navy Departments are making their selections of personnel to compose the missions which will be called for as soon as the bill becomes law. It was announced some time ago that at the outset plans call for staff and technical personnel only, and in small numbers, from both the Armed Services. Inasmuch as the President's proposal was not for combat units but military equipment and instruction in its use. Normal procedure would call for sending to Athens and Ankara the principal officers of the sea-ground-air missions at the earliest practicable date, to permit them to study the military needs of both countries, to learn the views of those two governments, and to determine the amount and character of armament immediately required. This would in turn help to determine the number and character of personnel from the United States' armed forces whose services can be used effectively and who would thereafter proceed to the Middle East as staff advisers and technicians. A great deal will depend therefore upon the judgment of the officers making up the initial mission. They will have to determine finally the roles in prospect of the Greek purpose is to extinguish the guerrillas along the northern frontier, it is assumed that the principal emphasis will be upon training the Greeks in constabulary and patrol techniques and equipping them accordingly. If heavier formations are called for, different weapons and equipment will be required and obviously a different selection of training personnel. The additional aid to Greece which is contemplated, in the form of food and economic support (Turkey's $100,000,000 credit is for military purposes only) calls for different personnel altogether. Announcement on all these matters will almost certainly be made as soon as the House takes favorable action, in line with the report of its own Foreign Affairs committee and with the 67-23 vote of last Tuesday in the Senate. Effective aid to the President's proposal came from Secretary of State Marshall, in the form of a week-end cablegram assuring the Senate that not only had he assisted in formulating the original plan for supporting the integrity of Greece and Turkey, but he continues to regard the adoption of the plan as essential. His message was of significance by reason of the Secretary's current presence in Moscow, his recent meeting with Generalissimo Stalin, and his presumably sure knowledge of the Soviet government's attitude and intentions. In spite of this advice from the nation's best informed diplomatic source, there was lingering opposition to the measure, an extreme example being afforded by Senator Johnson of Colorado who asserted that this action is "like a declaration of war" and who was sharply reproved by Senator Vandenberg, chairman of Foreign Relations. The measure authorizes the grant of credits totaling $400,000,000, and (inasmuch as appropriations must be made in a separate measure) permits the RFC to make a $100,000,000 advance as a time saver.

The Military Staff Committee of the United Nations, whose meetings during the past year had seemed to be close to profitless, has finally reached a decision which opens the road for a great many others. It is that the international police force, whose character has been under discussion for nearly a year, will be limited to one which can handle disputes among small countries. If this implies that the force would be used to discipline the little fellows and ignore the offenses of the great powers, it is at least a recognition of reality. The great powers possess a veto in the Security Council, and it is difficult to believe that any great power against which the international police force was about to be used would fail to impose a veto in advance upon any such measure. The Military Staff Committee, unable to get the loaf, has decided to accept the single slice, its hope being to get the police force into existence in a minor role at least, until such time as the veto may be voluntarily abandoned. Upon that distant date, it is reasoned, the force may enlarge its capacity and its functions. It is yet to be proven that the Security Council will support the present tentative decision of its military branch, particularly as the committee's report includes a great many items of which this basic decision on police-force responsibility is but one. What, for example, will be the composition of the police force in sea, ground and air units, and hence what will be the contributions from the great powers whose representatives make up the Military Staff committee? What contributions in manpower will be asked from the lesser members of United Nations? What use will be made of the sea and air bases of member nations, and by what compulsion? On all of these matters it is understood there are differences of opinion in the Military Staff itself. The largest question of all perhaps will be on the determination of command—will there be a commander-in-chief for the international police force, and how will he be selected? Or will the watchfulness of the powers determine rather that command shall be exercised by something comparable to a joint chiefs of staff? It is wholly unlikely that the Military Staff Committee will come to agreement on this issue and it is probable that the Security Council itself will have difficulty in doing so.

The last week-end witnessed the explosion of 3500 tons of carefully planted charges on Helgoland, intended to destroy absolutely the military installations on that costly rock guarding the North Sea approach to Germany. Examination shows that the pens from which during two wars German U-boats set forth on the raids have at last been made useless, that the giant batteries were left in ruin, and 8 miles of tunneling collapsed. The great rock is still there, however, and will bear watching in years to come: it was "demilitarized" after World War I.

The American decision to proceed with organization and support of a South Korean government, in view of prolonged Soviet delay in resuming negotiations for reunifying North and South Korea, has had prompt results, and there now is hope for ultimate easing of the difficult task set for the U. S. commander in South Korea, Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge. It will be remembered that on his recent trip to Washington General Hodge explained the vital need of unifying these complementary halves of Korea under a single economy, if not a single political government. The Secretary of State therefore requested of Moscow a resumption of the meetings of the joint American-Russian commission (they were terminated in May, 1946) looking toward reports of progress by the end of the summer. Mr. Molotov agrees, and suggests 20 May as the meeting date. However, he renews the old Soviet objection to dealing with any Koreans who ever opposed the temporary trusteeship; this objection would rule out practically all politically minded Koreans other than the Communists, and is so unacceptable to the State Department that a change of view is hoped for. It is at least the first break in Russia's solid refusal to discuss Korean unity.

The exact means of administering in the future the 30-odd outlying defense bases for the Panama Canal are again under discussion. Assistant Secretary of War Howard C. Petersen, on an inspection visit to the Canal Zone, declined the suggestion of President Jimenez of Panama that the bases be jointly administered by the two countries, stating succinctly that the war taught the error of that sort of administration. He favors rather a completely unified command. Approximately 100 of the war-time outlying bases have been returned to Panama; those which remain are regarded by Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, commander of the Canal Department, as necessary to defense of the canal, providing for a perimeter defense to supplement that within the Canal Zone itself.

Efficiency Reports—The long awaited Army officer efficiency report, it has been learned, has been completed and will soon be released to the Service. The Personnel Research and Procedure Branch in New York City has for some time been working on the formulation of an acceptable report which will be easily adaptable for use with the system of officer promotion planned in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

General officers have been polled as to their views concerning such a system, and the methods to be used are largely a result of their ideas concerning an adequate system of tabulating the efficiency of individuals. It is understood that the resulting forms and plans for their utilization have received final General Staff approval and that their execution by officer personnel of the Army will be required in the near future.

In the event that that current personnel legislation fails of passage the records obtained under the new system will still be of value in any subsequent system of recording officer efficiency records which may be placed in effect.

Judge Advocate General's Department—Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Green, The Judge Advocate General, addressed the class at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., on 22 April. He spoke on "Domestic Disturbances—Their Joint Aspects," and his remarks were based on his experiences as Executive to the Military Governor of Hawaii from December, 1941 to April, 1943.

Maj. Herbert E. Wenig has been relieved from JAGO and assigned to a Separation Center for relief from active duty. Col. Samuel F. Cohn, who has been chief of the Examinations Branch, Military Justice Group, has been transferred from JAGO to the Office of the Under Secretary, where he will be a member of the Board of Contract Appeals.

Col. Claude B. Mickelwait, recently Theater Judge Advocate of US Forces, European Theater, has returned from Germany and is presently assigned to JAGO, to which he will report on completion of leave. Colonel Mickelwait was replaced as Theater Judge Advocate by Col. James L. Harbaugh, jr.

National Guard—Air officers of the National Guard appeared 22 April before the Secretary of War's Examining Board for Brigadier Generals of the Line in the National Guard.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglas, commanding general of the First Air Force, is president of the board. Other members are Brig. Gen. Louis E. Boutwell, Boston, Mass., commanding general of the 51st Air Wing of the National Guard, and Brig. Gen. Winston W. Kratz, St. Louis, Mo., commanding general of the 71st Air Wing.

Candidates for the rank of major general in the National Guard will appear before a board scheduled to meet in May, and officers other than air officers who are candidates for the rank of brigadier general will appear before a board scheduled to meet in June. Maj. Gen. Butler B. Miltonberger, Chief of the National Guard Bureau, has announced.

Since 12 April 57 National Guard units have been federally recognized. This brings recognized units to a total of 1,650. Oklahoma and Alabama have had all their ground units inspected for federal recognition. Pennsylvania leads the states in the total number of federally recognized units with 112, Oklahoma is second with 109, Connecticut third with 74, Michigan fourth with 71, and Alabama fifth with 69.

Lt. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding general of the New York National Guard, announced 18 April at a conference of senior officers held at the 7th Regiment Armory, New York City, that all ground units of the federally recognized New York National Guard, as well as the remaining units of the New York State Guard which are awaiting recognition, will undergo field training at Camp Smith, Peekskill, N. Y., this summer.

Signal Corps—Lt. Col. William M. Van Harlingen, Chief, Military Personnel Branch, Office of the Chief Signal Officer, has been ordered to China as a member of the Army Advisory Group. He will be on duty for several weeks at Ft. Monmouth before departing for his new station. His successor is Lt. Col. Roland H. Mapes.

Other Signal Corps assignments include that of Lt. Col. J. H. Beals Bogman as Chief, Industrial Mobilization Branch; Lt. Col. Francis C. Bowen to Engineering and Technical Division; Capt. Comfort K. Starr, Inf., as Assistant to the Chief Signal Officer, and Capt. Chester A. Hall, jr., to Plans and Intelligence Branch.

Lt. Col. M. R. Kunitz, Deputy Commander of the Alaska Communication System, and 1st Lt. H. W. Wilken, both stationed at Anchorage, have received letters of commendation from Brig. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, Commanding General, Alaska Air Command, for services rendered during the rescue of the crew of a lost B-29.

Army Reserve—Active duty training of 60 to 90 days with the staffs and faculties of the four principal Army Ground Forces service schools is being offered 142 qualified Reserve officers under quotas recently announced by AGF Headquarters.

Thirty officers may take training at each of the following schools: The Infantry School, The Armored School, The Artillery School and The Ground General School. In addition, a quota of 22 officers in special fields who are qualified to instruct in their specialties has been established for active duty training at the Ground General School.

Reservists for this group are sought with the following MOS's, in the numbers indicated: 8503—Photo Interpreter, 4; 9318—Order of Battle Specialist, 2; 9302—Counter-Intelligence Officer, 3; 9305—Psychological Warfare Officer, 5; 9316—Prisoner of War Interrogation Officer, 4; Intelligence Department Specialist (no MOS number), 4.

Officers volunteering for active duty under any of the quotas may be of either company or field grade.

General Courtney H. Hodges, commanding general of the First Army, has announced that Col. Thomas F. Byrne, president of the Chemical and Combustion Corp., New York City, will command the 313th Coast Artillery.

The Reserve Officers' Association of the United States has announced the itineraries for its National President and Executive Director for speaking engagements at several state department conventions. State conventions are being held throughout the country preparatory to the National Convention scheduled for Miami, Fla., 18, 19, 20 and 21 June. Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, Executive Director, will attend the New York Department Convention at Albany 1 and 2 May, and will go to California to address the Department Convention at Marysville 3 and 4 May. Brig. Gen. Donald B. Adams, National President, will go to San Antonio, Tex., 3 May to speak before the Texas Department. He will speak at the Pennsylvania Department Convention at Wilkes-Barre 16 May and at the Illinois Department Convention at Rockford 23 May.

Marine Corps—A precedent was set at the Marine Air Base, Cherry Point, N. C., this month with the establishment of the first Naval Apprentice Program to be established on a Marine Corps base. Lt. Col. Frank H. Collins, USMC, Industrial Relations Officer, officiated at initial ceremonies conducted at the Vocational Training Building and Col. S. S. Jack, USMC, Assembly and Repair Officer, addressed the 103 members of the first class.

The apprentice school is operated under the basic plan set up by the Navy Department. The first apprentice school was established by the Navy in 1912, to build a well-trained group of civilian personnel in all of the skills and crafts that pertain to Navy Department work. In instituting schools of this kind the Department is able not only to train people in the crafts and skills, but also in the methods of the Navy Department.

Training has been stressed, not only in the practical shop crafts but in the analogous academic work that goes with the crafts, thus training the personnel to work with their hands as well as to think and plan their work. The program has proved its worth since its establishment by creating for the Navy a large number of well-trained personnel, many of whom are potential supervisors. The initial program at Cherry Point is set up to train men in ten basic trades or crafts: machinist, sheetmetal, industrial electrician, automobile mechanic, aircraft mechanic general, aircraft mechanic motors, aviation electrician, aviation instrument maker, aviation metalsmith and aviation machinist.

Regular Navy Transferees—Attention of all Naval District Commandants and Naval Air Base Commanders has been directed to requirements that officers appointed to the Regular Navy who have been on inactive duty be placed on temporary duty awaiting assignment by the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

This temporary assignment is temporary duty only, and should not include duty involving flying in the case of Naval Aviators. In many instances, these officers have been on inactive duty for periods of more than three months and require a flight refresher course prior to permanent assignment to duty involving flying.

Finance Department—Lt. Col. Donald M. Forney, Chief of the Accounts Division, Office of the Chief of Finance, accompanied by Lt. Col. Fred W. Anderson, attended a conference at Headquarters, Army Ground Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., last week with representatives of the six U. S. Armies relative to cost accounting procedures to be established for the War Department. The Director, Service, Supply and Procurement, WDGS, recently charged the Chief of Finance with the responsibility for preparing a manual containing standards of terminology and of cost elements; standard functions to be costed; standards of procedures used in costing operations; standard reporting forms for the accumulation of uniform summary cost information from all installations. This information will be gathered from analysis of trial test reports from pilot testing stations throughout the country on cost accounting.

Lt. Col. Cesareo Reguera, former chief of the Service Branch, Receipts and Disbursements Division, Office of the Chief of Finance left Washington last week en route to his new assignment in South America as Finance Officer, U. S. Army, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. This office was recently designated and added to the list of Finance Offices, U. S. Army, which operate as class II installations under the Chief of Finance. Colonel Reguera will replace Maj. Vernon C. Curtis in Brazil.

Maj. James A. Stewart was recently assigned to duty in the Civil Affairs Division, War Department Special Staff, in the Pentagon. He served as finance officer, 79th Finance Disbursing Section in Africa, Italy and France during 1943-45. Prior to going overseas, Major Stewart served on the Staff and Faculty of the Finance Training Center.

Colonels Alfred N. Taylor, Finance Officer, U. S. Army, Philadelphia, Pa., and Herbert S. Jordan, Finance Officer, Third Army, Atlanta, Ga., visited the Office of the Chief of Finance last week.

Transportation Corps—Lt. Col. Archibald W. Lyon, TC, RA, who has served with the Third Military Railway Service in the Pacific, is scheduled to return to the Zone of Interior in June. He will be assigned to Ft. Eustis, Va.

Col. Herbert D. May, Executive Officer, Supply Division, OCT, who has been on duty with the Transportation Corps since its establishment in 1942, will depart shortly on terminal leave prior to reverting to inactive status and return to his civilian activities in the bituminous coal mining industry at Bluefield, West Virginia.

Col. Donald C. Foote, TC, former Commander of the 518th Truck Group, QM-TC, in Europe, more recently in charge of the Motor Pools at Ft. Eustis and on duty with the Integration Board for Regular Army at Scott Field, Ill., has been ordered to proceed to Nanking, China, for duty with the Army Advisory Group as a representative of The Transportation Corps.

Capt. George F. Yeager, who served during the war with the 756th Railway Shop Battalion in E.T.O., has been recalled to active duty in Transportation Corps for a period of ninety days, and has been assigned to duty with the Military Railway Service Division, Office of the Chief of Transportation.

Corps of Engineers—Army Engineer research and development facilities of the Engineer Board at Fort Belvoir, Va., have been redesignated by the War Department as the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories.

The Engineer Board will continue to function as the directive and policy-making body for the Laboratories. The change is a part of the recent reorganization at Fort Belvoir in which all Army activities were consolidated under a single headquarters with the establishment of The Engineer Center, under the command of Maj. Gen. W. M. Hoge. At present Col. E. S. J. Ervine is serving in a triple capacity as Director of Research and Development of The Engineer Center, President of the Engineer Board, and commanding officer of the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories.

Navy Dental Care—Dependents of the Navy and Marine Corps are warned (In Alnav 104) that dental treatment is not available from civilian or naval sources at all outlying stations outside the continental limits of the United States. Prior to departure from the continental limits, all dependents should receive a dental examination and have such dental treatment accomplished as is necessary to assure that they will not require dental treatment while at an outlying station.

The charming simplicity of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Coconut Grove, Fla., was the setting of the wedding of Lt. Jane Ellen Gray and Lt. Osmund A. Wisness at eight o'clock, 11 April. White tapers burned in tall candelabra on either side of the altar which was banked with green fern and bouquets of white gladioli. To the traditional strains of Wagner's wedding march, Miss Gray entered on the arm of Col. Clyde M. Beck, who gave her in marriage.

She wore a white satin gown with sweetheart neckline, long pointed sleeves, and gored skirt which fell to the floor in soft fullness. Her fingertip veil of illusion was caught in a soft crown of lace and she carried a small white Testament topped by a dainty bouquet of tube roses tied with streamers of white satin ribbon. Lt. Phoebe Carlson was maid of honor, and Capt. Betty Jensen, bridesmaid.

Lt. Wisness was attended by Lt. Wallace Jensen as best man and ushers were: Lt. Robert Brashear and Lt. Richard Skinner.

Unwritten laws and regulations which have come to be recognized as such by the Army formed the basis for an interesting talk by Brig. Gen. J. R. Sheets, assistant chief of staff, G-2, Fourth Army Headquarters, Fort Sam Houston, when he was guest speaker for the Kelly Field Women's club monthly luncheon 8 April at the Kelly Field Officers' Club.

"Army Customs and Taboos" was General Sheets' topic. He explained customs as things to do, and taboos as things not to do. Customs, he said, are of two kinds, official and social.

As an example of an Army taboo, General Sheets said no soldier carries an umbrella, a parcel or pushes a baby buggy, but he can carry a baby. One custom is that a junior officer walks on the left of a senior officer, dating back to Roman days and "sword side."

General Sheets was introduced by Brig. Gen. G. H. Beverley, commanding general of the San Antonio Air Materiel Area, Mrs. Sheets was a special guest of Mrs. Beverley.

Obituary

Admiral Louis R. de Steiguer, USN (Ret.)

Admiral Louis Rodolph de Steiguer, USN, (Ret.), a pioneer in gunfire control and former Commander-in-Chief of the Battle Fleet, died 19 April at the Naval Hospital, Bethesda.

With Rear Adm. William Thomas, USN, Chief of Navy Chaplains, officiating, he was buried in Arlington National Cemetery on 21 April.

A native of Ohio, Admiral de Steiguer was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1889. He won medals in the Spanish-American War as an Ensign, and commanded the battleship Arkansas with distinction during World War I. Serving with the British at Scapa Flow, he won the Distinguished Service Medal.

He took command of the Atlantic training fleet with the rank of Rear Admiral in 1921. He was appointed a battleship division head with the temporary rank of Vice Admiral in 1926.

Under President Coolidge, Admiral de Steiguer was given the top naval sea-going assignment as Commander-in-Chief of the Battle Fleet. At the time of his retirement in 1933, he was Commandant of the Third Naval District and the New York Navy Yard.

Admiral de Steiguer's inventions are credited in Navy circles with having considerable contribution to development of present-day gunnery and fire control standards.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katharine Constable de Steiguer, of 1302 Eighteenth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Financial Digest

President Truman, addressing the annual luncheon of members of the Associated Press in New York City this week cautioned that the economic situation is acute and appealed for a general effort toward price reduction to prevent a business recession. The President said that there must be moderation on the part of business and forbearance on the part of labor, as well as greater productivity. Of present prosperity in America he painted a bright picture, saying that our peacetime economy not only can equal our wartime economy but can surpass it.

The nation-wide telephone strike has now entered its third week, with picket line disturbances and outbreaks of violence reported in Detroit, Louisville, Minneapolis, and Seattle. The Department of Labor, making a new move toward settlement, summoned officials of three key units of the Bell System to a Washington meeting.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation, addressing the Economic Club of New York recently, said that the most serious situation the economy faces at this time is the demand for further wage increases in substantial amounts.

"If this should take place based upon individual business considerations," Mr. Sloan said, "it might serve to facilitate the adjustment. In all probability, however, it will take the form of a new national wage pattern. If this occurs it is inescapable that there must be faced further increases in prices, spread quite generally throughout the economy as a whole, affecting many categories of goods and services. Some enterprises can, and if they can, should absorb such increase in wages, in whole or in part, out of existing profits. Others will be unable to do so. Such a situation is certain to delay the progress of adjustment, to accentuate the possibility of a business recession and intensify it should it come."

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

The importance of America's ocean shipping and international air services, together with the ship and airplane building industries, is emphasized by the greater international commitments and responsibilities thrust upon the United States by the war, in the view of the International Transport Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Declarations based on the committee's recommendations are to be proposed by the Chamber's Committee on Policy to the Chamber's Annual Meeting in Washington from 28 April to 1 May.

Advocating a strong and consistent national policy with respect to the American merchant marine, implemented by vigorous administration of that policy, the committee holds that recent war experience clearly demonstrates that the United States must have a higher degree of security and independence in the field of ocean transportation.

It urges broad public understanding of the fact that subsidies provided under the Merchant Marine Act do not give advantage to American shipping over that of other nations but only seek to equalize American with lower foreign construction and operating costs where they exist.

Pointing out that foreign competition has rapidly mobilized itself in the first full year of peace, the committee stresses the urgent need for passenger vessels and other special types of vessels suitable for conversion to troop transports and naval service in time of emergency. It commends the recent appointment by the President of a special board to study shipping and shipbuilding needs.

As one of the greatest generators of international air traffic, the Committee states that the United States has a legitimate interest in developing and maintaining American-flag services on a corresponding scale.

Unification of Services

Gen. Vandegrift—No. Sen. Tydings—Would it not be better to include in your amendments that the Commander-in-Chief may transfer the Marines to any duty he thinks best in an emergency? Would you object to the Marine Corps being transferred to cooperate with the Army at any time the President specifies—that the Marine Corps shall be trained with the Army for, say, 2 years?

Gen. Vandegrift—Yes. Sen. Tydings—But your amendments would guarantee the integrity of the Marine Corps. Would it not be better to put in an amendment guaranteeing the entity of the Marine Corps? Doesn't the language of your amendments allow the President to do what you fear could take place?

Gen. Vandegrift—Yes. Sen. Tydings—What is to prevent Chateau Thierry from being repeated?

Gen. Vandegrift—Nothing. But it would be better and safer to prescribe by law what the definite functions shall be.

Sen. Tydings—If we pass the bill with your amendments would it not give authority to place the Marine Corps in a joint command? And that would not change present authority to do this. The Executive Order gives the President open power to take the Marine Corps and order it to train with the Army for a stated time. If we agree the President has this authority in peace or war, your amendments do not change that authority.

Gen. Vandegrift—He might take an operational force—one of the supporting forces of the Marine Corps, but not the Marine Corps.

Sen. Tydings—What is there in the bill that would prevent the President from transferring the entire Marine Corps to the command of the Army Commanding Officer?

Gen. Vandegrift—There is nothing. But if the bill were passed without an amendment, I would take my chance. I would like to see the functions stated in the law. I do not see how the Marine Corps could be transferred.

Sen. Tydings—I mean attached. Do you mean it could be attached in peace or war?

Gen. Vandegrift—Yes. Sen. Tydings—Your amendments would duplicate the Executive Order and do not protect the Marine Corps entity.

Sen. Robertson—I admire the courage of the commandant.

Sen. Tydings—I admire his courage and I admire the Marine Corps. But I do not believe he has hit the target he aims at.

Emphasis in favor of the bill was contained in a letter received by Senator Gurney, chairman of the committee from former Secretary of War Stimson. The letter, read into the record as testimony, was as follows, in part:

"I earnestly hope that the Congress will enact this bill at this session. I consider this measure to be one of the most important peacetime forward steps ever proposed in our military history ranking in significance with the great Army reforms of Elihu Root made after the Spanish War, and it is my belief that the opportunity for advance which is now presented must not be ignored; and it will not come so readily again."

Gen. Bliss Surgeon General

President Truman sent to the Senate on 23 April the nomination of Brig. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss to be The Surgeon General of the Army with the rank of major general for a term of four years.

General Bliss, who has served as Deputy Surgeon General since 1 Jan. 1946, will succeed Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk whose four year term expires 1 May and who will retire from active duty.

Also forwarded to the Senate was the nomination of Col. George E. Armstrong, now chief, Office of Personnel, of the Office of The Surgeon General, to be the Deputy Surgeon General with rank of brigadier general for a four year term.

General Bliss was born at Chelsea, Mass., 17 May 1888. He was graduated from Tufts College in 1910 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps in September 1911. He served on active duty until May 1913, when he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Medical Corps of the Regular Army. He was graduated from the Army Medical College in June 1913.

After tours of duty at various stations in the United States and Hawaii, General Bliss entered Harvard Medical School for a special course in surgery, receiving a degree in Surgery there in 1921.

Before World War I General Bliss served as Chief of Surgery at Sternberg General Hospital, Manila, P. I., at Ft. Sam Houston and at William Beaumont General Hospital, El Paso, Tex. He became a military observer in London from September 1940 to January 1941, and became Surgeon of the First Army and Eastern Defense Command in 1942. He was assigned as Chief of Operations and Assistant Surgeon General in the Office of the Surgeon General in 1943, serving in that capacity until his appointment as Deputy Surgeon General last January. During World War II he made extensive tours of the Pacific Areas, and later served as an observer at the Bikini Atom Bomb Test.
